Technology and Soul: Jung & Posthumanism

Technology brings many gifts, but its shadow is omnipresent. More than ever we need insight into what motivates progress and innovation in the Computer Age.

Glen Slater, Ph.D., is Associate Chair of the Jungian and Archetypal Studies Program at Pacifica Graduate Institute, California.

Encountering the Shadow: Bringer of the Light

One of C.G. Jung's most foundational psychological concepts concerns the reality of the shadow, both at the personal as well as the deeper, collective level. He held that to encounter and accept our shadow, "the thing we have no wish to be" (CW 16, §470), is fundamental to the process of individuation, to becoming whole.

Judith Dowling is a Zürich trained Jungian analyst with a private practice in Victoria, B.C., and current president of the Jung Society of Victoria.

Garbage and the Soul

Collectively, we seek to rise above our trash, but that usually entails a costly dissociation from it. We will explore the archetypal significance of waste with an imaginative inquiry into what the soul of garbage longs for.

Matthew Kelly is a graduate of the Ontario Association of Jungian Analysts Training Program and has a private practice on Quadra Island, B.C.

April 26

The Red Book: One Man's Personal Odyssey or a Timeless Quest?

In an age in which we are encouraged to turn outwards for quick answers about our life and our place in the world, what use do we have for the insights and ideas derived from one man's psychedelic and tortured explorations of his inner gods and demons? Why should we, with our advanced technological culture and scientific rationalism, care about one man's search for his soul?

Pohsuan Zaide, Ph.D., is a Jungian scholar and psychotherapist with a doctorate in Jungian studies from Saybrook University in San Francisco.

Collective Healing: A New Analytical Perspective

In 1946, after the horrors of WW11 and the Holocaust, C.G. Jung noted, "Individuation does not shut one out from the world, but gathers the world to oneself" (CW8, §432), in essence expressing his sense that we share the world with all living beings and that collective trauma asks for collective healing.

Eberhard Riedel, Ph.D., DCSW, is a Jungian analyst, clinical social worker, photographer and teacher living in Seattle.

Once Upon a Time...Why Jungians Read Fairy Tales

"How do we interpret a fairy tale? Or stalk it, rather, because it is really like stalking a very evasive stag." Marie-Louise von Franz, The Interpretation of Fairy Tales, p.37

Suzan Rood Wilson, Stephanie Gierman and James Max Gossett are Seattle, Washington based Jungian analysts who will co-facilitate the evening, as they do in their popular Fairy Tale Fridays educational series for The C.G.Jung Society of Seattle.
